

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

After the death of one of the partners, the surviving partner and the client agreed that the survivor should continue the suit, paying all costs, and if finally successful, should receive forty-five per cent in addition to the original contingent fee which the firm were to receive. The deceased partner's heirs afterwards executed to the surviving partner an assignment of their rights in the original contract upon the consideration that he "would do what was right" by them if the suit was successful. Upon the success of the suit the court held that inasmuch as the several agreements did not constitute separate contracts but formed modifications of the original written contract, the deceased partner's heirs were entitled to half of fifteen per cent of the amount of the judgment obtained.

Promissory Note—Place of Payment—Insolvent Firm—Member's Rights as Creditors—In re Parisian Cloak & Suit Co.'s Estate, 34 Atl. Rep. 224 (Penn.). When two insolvent partnerships have practically the same composition in their membership but one is creditor of the other, the former cannot participate in the distribution of the assets of the latter until the claims of the other creditors are satisfied.

Partnership Agreement—Construction.—Magilton v. Stevenson et al., 34 Atl. Rep. 235 (Pa.). A provision in a partnership agreement required an equal division of losses on condition that the partner who furnished the capital should not be put to any loss over a stated amount. Held, that the loss of said partner in excess of this definite amount was a joint and several liability of the other.

BANKRUPTCY.

Bankruptcy—Assignment.—Lancey v. Goss et al., 33 Atl. Rep. 1071 (Maine). Such items of estate as the assignee declines to appropriate or utilize remain the property of the bankrupt, always subject to the superior right and title of the assignee and creditors, and until such paramount right is asserted the bankrupt has a title good against all others.

Bankruptcy—Fraudulent Conveyance—Possession Retained by Mortgage.—Bank of Hazelhurst v. Goodbar et al., 19 Southern Reporter 204 (Miss.). The security which the appellant, one of the chief creditors and the assignee of an insolvent firm, accepted from its debtors included a mortgage of the stock of goods and store accounts, under contemporaneous oral agreement by which the debtors were permitted to continue their mercantile business,